CLASSIFICATION: Darrell Stone

Darrell was born in Mankato, MN and shortly thereafter moved to Iowa. Darrell's father was a teacher, and a teaching job brought the family to the White Bear Lake area when Darrell was in elementary school. He attended Lakeaires, Sunrise, and then Mariner high school before going to Lakewood Community College. After earning this degree there, Darrell attended the University of Minnesota and majored in technical communications. Darrell outlined some of his past jobs: he has washed dishes at an ice cream parlor, worked the record department at Target, worked the camera department at Kmart, worked as a janitor in the White Bear Lake school system (which led to his meeting wife Kathy), and worked as a technical writer. In 2002, Darrell started work as a financial advisor, and has been enjoying it ever since.

We are looking for host families during this time.	21 st century jobs. Further, many students who attend a 4 year college don't graduate within 6 years, some choose degrees that don't necessarily prepare them for sustainable work, and some students don't think they have an option aside from a 4 year college. The Earn and Learn program therefore connects these companies with these young people for an apprenticeship and career training opportunity.

Murray Death, Sundance Family Foundation

Sundance Family Foundation is a non-profit group that strives to support youth development and strengthen family stability by offering grants to get youth job ready. The Sundance Family Foundation was started in 2003 by St. Paul residents Nancy Jacobs and Mark Sandercott.

Murray discussed their Earn and Learn apprenticeship program, which helps companies connect with young adults and provide mentoring with formalized job training. The program identifies companies challenged to find and retain skilled employees, and this workforce often needs new skills to keep up with end a 4 year college don't at don't necessarily prepare n't think they have an opearn program therefore conor an apprenticeship and
